Communication, compassion, person-centeredness – all the core values that shape healthcare provision and delivery in our community, integrate to define what we understand as the human dimensions of healthcare.

School of Humanities and Lee Kong Chian School of Medicine Nanyang Technological University are pleased to host the International Symposium on Communication in Health Care 2019. The Symposium will bring together healthcare professionals, clinicians, linguists, communication scholars, educators and researchers from around the world to share their ideas, experience, and research findings on this theme. We will also have a series of panels for patients, caregivers and healthcare professionals to share and interact.
